RAVENING WOLVES IN FINLAND .- A correspondent from Finland writes respecting a terrible cvil which is now besetting the country in which he lives, and to suggest a remedy. The woods, about fifty English miles from Hango, are the haunts of a great number of welves, which of late have been so audacious as not to be contented with tearing cows and sheep, but are constantly attacking even human beings. In less than two months eleven children have been carried away and caten by the bessis. Very recently a lt le boy, aged nine years, was evertaken on the high road by a single wo'f and dragged into a neighboring field.

The lad escaped with his life only by the approach of a stalwart peasant. Another case of very like occurrence, was that of a man who. while driving a sledge, was attacked by a welf, which sprang up from the ground and tere his arm. The animals are especially numerous in the southern and most populous parts of the country, where they come down to the very thresholds of the houses, and in some instances children have been carried off under the very eyes of their parents. Seldom more than one wolf is seen at a time; and the belief is that, like the man cating tigers of India, these beasts are either emboldened by hunger or have been rendered during by impunity and the acquired zest for human blood.

A price on the head of each wolf killed or captured alive has been fixed by the Finnish Government; but the peasantry appear to be incapable of coping with the invaders. Hunters are now being appointed and sent into the woody districts fr. quented by wolves, but hith. dissed by the heavy rate, near Franconia, erto with small encess. The correspondent is Oxing to the seere except on the lower Pa- of the opinion that English gentlemen fond of
